THE WEEKLY STANDARD.

The Argentine Confederation

Events have marched rapidly of late; Mitre's expedition to Cordova, Urquiza's alliance with B. Aires and Derqui's flight are almost simultaneous, rendering it difficult to say what is the cause or which the effect. We have always said that Urquiza has the casting voice in the national councils, and it is probable that his attitude has at once animated Mitre to invade the interior, and alarmed Derqui so as to induce, his abdication.

Subsequent to Mitre's entrance into Rosario, the titular President, like Ishmael in the desert, would seem to have turned a complete vagabond. At one time he was in Paraná, soon after en route for Cordoba, then vegetating on the banks of the Carcarnña and finally locked up in a delapidated edifice in Santa Fé which served both for prison & custom house. Where was the army of the Confederation? where the brave Puntanos, dashing Correntinos, invincible Entre-Rians, alas! even brigadiers Saa & Virasoro, had gone off with their tinsel decorations and stolen cattle, leaving President Derqui,

"Deserted in his utmost need"
"By those his former bounty fed"

Two journalists, Calvo and Barra, alone followed the fortunes of their master, and amid the universal depravity, it is refreshing to find such traits of heroic fidelity. As the Swiss guards stood by Lewis XVI, so, these consistent advocates of an exploded policy resolved to "die game" rather than live, traitors. During his stay in the capital of Santa Fé, Derqui was alarmed by signs of popular discontent, and resolved on making for the scene of his former coup d'état, Cordoba. But Lopez, surnamed Mascarilla, stopped his way, intimating that such was Urquiza's pleasure. Seeing then that all was lost he hurried to his family at Paraná, and, as Louis Philippe did at Saint Cloud in 48, told them pathetically, to pack their trunks, for all was over. Although not a certainty it is supposed that H. B. M. S. "Ardent" which passed this port on Saturday last, had on board the fugitive President bound for Montevideo: that vessel, before leaving Paraná, had refused all communication with the shore and, passing by Rosario, some pretended to recognise Derqui's family. The "Dolorcitas" also hailed the "Ardent" but received no reply to their question about Paraná.

Urquiza, who decreed a just vengeance on the assassins of Virasoro, who rejected our Deputies for informality of election, who elevated Derqui to the curule Chair, and dictated every important measure, is now content to eat his words, abandon his agents and unite with his late enemies. He is said to have offered Mitre 3,000 cavalry to assist in the pacification of the interior, and promised to disarm the steamers, returning them to their former packet-service. In fine, as Governor of Entre-Rios, he will confine his attention to that province, retiring into private life to rest upon his laurels and sip mate. Nor will he again enter the political arena, unless called by the voice of the nation.

The corps d'armée destined for operation on Cordoba is very small; and, altho' Garibaldi conquered Sicily with 800 men, we think General Paunero would find 3,000 not half enough if he should meet with active hostilities. It is, however, presumed that none of the caudillos between Paraná and the Cordillera will attempt to move without Urquiza's sanction. The National Executive may shower paper pellets, but Mitre's grape-shot is more convincing, and from the united reasons advanced by the two Generals, it is a clear consequence that the functionaries of Paraná may as well shut up, and change the venue. The ordinary amusement of skirmishing still goes on, Mitre's vanguard being encamped on this side, and Virasoro's remnant of 600 men on the other side, of the Carcarnná. This stream is at present much swollen so that it is not easy to arrive at close quarters, if even both parties were anxious for a tilt. Our main body is still about 1½ leagues N. of Rosario. The invasion of the Indians is confirmed: the Cacique Mariano was at Melincué with 200 warriors, taming horses; and, from the flying parties seen beyond Azul and Cruz Alta, it is known that the redmen are preparing an inroad imagining that our army was scattered at Pavon. It is said large parties of provincial gauchos have joined common cause with the savages against our frontier, making a total of some thousands.

As yet we do not know in what quarter to expect an attack, but Mitre is busily preparing detachments for emergencies, and it is believed that the garrison of Rosario will be reduced to 2 battalions of infantry a few squadrons of cavalry, and a company of gunners with 6 field-pieces, all under the orders of Major Mitre. The new head-quarters will, probably, be in a more central point, near the converging limits of Santa Fé, Cordoba & Buenos Ayres. The intended movements are kept secret, as it is not impossible that, were they published in our Spanish journals, some of the caciques [thoughnot subscribers] might get a hold of them.

Meantime, the nett proceeds of the Rosario custom-house have been confiscated by Mitre, for the maintenance of our army, on the principle that, as the former is national property, it must go towards a national object, such as the troops raised by B. Ayres. The 5th & 6th brigades under Col. Arredondo had, by last accounts, taken up a position beyond the Carcarnñá. Baigorrea had marched his Indian contingent to a point indicated by the Commander-in-chief, who, moreover, gave the soubriquet "Gen. Paz" to a battalion of our Cordoban prisoners (now called volunteers.) The meaning of our fleet's indifference to the movements at Diamante, is now explained by the proposals of Urquiza to Mitre; confirming, what we have so often said that the General knows his own business best, and our ephemeral critics can scarcely judge his acts, unless indeed Mitre take them for counsellors, a measure we must unhesitatingly oppose.

A visit to the ruins of Mendoza.

This interesting brochure has been published by D. Felix Frias in the columns of the Tribuna. We regret that its length precludes our translating it, but wish to give our readers some extracts of the most telling passages.

It was a moonlit night when we visited the ruined city: some leagues before reaching Mendoza we perceived the shattered tenements which first indicated our approach to the mysterious scene of death; then baring our head we penetrated among the ruins with a feeling of awe, as if treading on the tombs of the departed.

What words can convey an idea of the tragedy here so recently enacted! Imagine a city full of life and bustle, at the hour of sunset, on the last evening in summer. Resting from their toils, surrounded by their families, some in genial conversation, others buying in the shops, and not a few assembled in church, where a Jesuit father was exhorting them to penance and preparation for the coming Holy Week; all, all the citizens in four seconds overwhelmed, and their city no more! A subterranean thunder bellowed hideously, and the earth shook so violently that the few survivors could neither walk nor stand. Then reigned a death-like stillness only interrupted by the howling of the dogs; at the same time, a thick cloud of dust obscured the moon, as with a funeral pall, and a fire breaking out in the principal street enveloped the ruins with a strange unearthly glimmer. Many perished in the flames, but, others contrived to crawl on broken limbs as far as the Alameda. An extreme cold was experienced, while the groans of those buried alive contributed to the sufferings of the survivors, who begged of God for mercy, thinking the terrible Day of Judgment had come.

In the country round, many wondered what had happened, and the gauchos seeing rockets, which accidentally exploded, concluded it was a merry-making and rushed into town. These savages, nowise awed by the wrathful visitation of Heaven, nor moved by the cries of the dying, set to plunder every thing: the sack lasted 4 days. This eternal stain upon your name and nation surpasses in horror the bloody orgies of Rosas. Some foreigners, whose country be untold, emulated our gauchos; one man was shot for robbery by those who wanted to take his booty. An unfortunate drunkard who had fallen asleep and was awakened by the earthquake, insisted that he had died the night before and was in hell, since he could see no city, but only flames and demon-like men around him.

The enemies of religion have asserted that these sacrilegious robbers fell on their knees when the ground quaked, and then continued their plunder: this is a malicious lie intended to cast odium upon those holy precepts which forbid such enormities. It was said the Jesuits [whom calumny follows like a shadow] alarmed the escaped victims by saying that the earth would swallow them up; but such a story is due rather to the wreckers who wished to paralyze the energies of all that might oppose their depredation.

In the suburb of St. Nicolas an hospital was formed of three large sheds which held 50 persons: the timely succour from Chili saved these poor people, who, clad in rude mourning, assisted at a daily mass for the repose of their lost relatives. After the destruction, there was heard a frightful echo in the Andes produced by an aereolite; but, to us there seemed a more horrible echo, twas the sound of the trumpet calling Argentines to civil war on the day after the catastrophe: it was unsheathing the weapons of Cain ere the unburied corpses were yet cold, which lay among the ruin profaned by our impiety. The very gauchos are after all, not so criminal as the authorities, who during half a century have left them in brutal ignorance; and we would ask is it true? that the money generously sent by foreign nations, for the surviving victims, was expended on shot and shell to mow down Argentines on a battlefield. Remember if the property of the dead is sacred, the money of the poor is doubly so.

A writer of the "Debates" has sought to explain away this awful phenomonon, by the law of Nature; yet who dictated such a law, or in what fabric was nature manufactured: the theory is adopted to make Nature independent of the Creator.

Yet we have seen the Creator's care, in a manner which justifies our incorregible fanaticism. One building has escaped, a large and handsome chapel of three aisles, in which took refuge a community of nuns and the members of St. Vincent de Paul's conference. Not far off the ground opened up a fissure from which welled out a stream of water. The pious sisters devote themselves to the education of such poor girls as escaped, while every effort is made to relieve the sufferers. Among those who have sent their contribution, is the holy and venerable Pontiff who once passed as a simple traveller through that very city whose destruction has moved his paternal heart. In the list of charity we must return special gratitude to Chile, Perú, Banda Oriental, Paraguay, Brasil, England and France, which nations have bestowed considerable sums. In particular Pius IX amidst all his domestic afflictions, as also the Emperor Napoleon, have been signally generous. Chile and Montevideo were the first to lend assistance, shewing that neither the waters of La Plata nor the peaks of the Andes are wide or lofty enough, to separate nations that wish to draw closer the links of Christian fraternity which unite us all in one great family. This inspires us with hope for the future in the genius of civilization.

The city of Mendoza has been utterly destroyed and 14,000 inhabitants buried in its ruins: we would then remind our Catholic readers that, to morrow being the festival of All Souls, they should consecrate a special part of their devotions before the altar of the Most High, to the pious memory of their brethern who perished on that sad occasion.

November 1 1861.
Felix Frias

The Emigration Scheme.

It will be perceived that an item of two million currency enters into the new budget "for immigration purposes." To any man of moderate experience in this country, such a vote appears eminently calculated to confer on us a signal blessing. The scarcity of farm servants, the increasing resources of our pampas, the high price of manual labor, all demonstrate to what utility the current of emigration may be here turned. Not even the United States, nor the Australian gold-fields nor the banks of the St. Lawrence, nor the pastures of Cape Colony afford the same advantages for the farmer or labouring man, as this country. The importation of 20,000 Irishmen would be therefore a common benefit to Buenos Ayres and our poorer countrymen at home. No selfish feeling induces us to wish that, of all European nations, Ireland should get the preference, but, if we consider the class of foreigners most in requisition, it will be admitted they are shepherds; and as the flocks of this province are almost totally held by Irishmen, there is a tacit admission of their superiority in this branch of industry.

Yet the modus operandi is also important, and it would be a decided mistake to propose, as is rumored, a fixed premium to captains of ships, for every passenger, if even such were all Irishmen. The Government emigration at home is conducted on a safe plan, and is productive of good results in the Australian colonies. Not only is it limited to certain conditions of life, but the intending emigrant must produce a certificate of good character from the priest and magistrate of his district. For if ships be laden pell-mell with an indiscriminate cargo of human live-stock, we run the risk of spending money to over-run the place with vagabonds. Supposing again that a conscientious captain succeeded in weeding out bad characters from a crowd of applicants, much inconvenience may be caused. As it will be evidently his interest to ship as many as possible, he will not look to their chance of employment or probable utility, and merely land them in this port to claim his freight. Milliners bankrupt tradesmen, ex-officio clerks are generally anxious for a change of air, and are just the persons not wanted here. Men with families and without money, girls with characters and without husbands, are equally useless.

Two kinds of emigrants are especially wanted: strong young men bringing a capital of £1,000 or upwards, and single farm servants. It is foolish to expect that stylish young swells with a couple of hundred pounds can better themselves here, since sheep are worth 10|0 each and less than 1,500 is too little for a start.

The class denominated farm-servants is very eligible, but, unhappily, we hear many complaints among our own countrymen, of the gross inexperience and exorbitant demands of many lately arrived. It would be, therefore, desirable to ensure for the public money, so expended, a selection of our home peasantry, striplings of brawney arms, robust constitution, sober habits and the least taste of experience.

This cannot be effected by shipping promiscuously a whole Barony or Parish, nor by means of the sagest navigators. It is necessary that some Agent, who feels and understands the interest of this country, should take in charge this Emigration scheme without any sordid view of percentage. Much will depend hereon. The two millions if rightly applied may give us 1,000 or 1,500 useful citizens, but, if merely given as a premium on live importation, must prove money thrown away, and perhaps, lay the seed of serious evils.

All's well that ends well.

The mission of Don Juan C. Ocampo has been fruitful in results. Rumor had spoken truly of an understanding between Mitre and Urquiza, and now nothing remains, but the official declaration, to inform us that the rival athletes have consented, in a charming and mutual manner, to cast all the blame of late differences on the luckless Derqui. Thus state-jugglery becomes canonized amongst us, and the ex-president slips between the two stools, Federal & Unitario, to the amusement of all parties. Politics are, of course, naturally variable, but, it would be difficult for any other than a S. American to follow the twists and turns of our most crooked diplomacy, even for a single season. Statesmen are the puppets and scribblers the showmen: a string is pulled, and up starts some well-known character for whom are invoked cheers or curses as suits the showman.

Poor Derqui! there are few among us who doubt that he was merely Urquiza's stalking-horse, and without saying whether he acted right or wrong, it is plain that he is made answerable for obeying his master. Some say he was an enthusiastic servant, often anticipating his superior's pleasure, and that this led him into many a faux pas. Others think that he conspired, with San, the overthrow of the Captain General. If he did, then grievously hath he answered for it; but we are inclined to believe rather it was Urquiza who betrayed his compadre. The former saw that he was urged to a war for which he was little prepared; and, being defeated, found it necessary to abandon either his friends or his cattle. He chose, with the instinct of selfishness, to imperil everything but his estancias; and hence we read of his treating with Mitre, at the very time that he abandons the President to their common enemies. "No hay mal que por bien no venga" is a proverb older than the days of Margariños Cervantes, and there can be little doubt that Urquiza's tergiversation and Derqui's flight will tend to a speedy resolution of standing difficulties

Latest News.

President Derqui bade his adieu to Paraná and the Sovereign Congress in a letter of abdication, stating that it was alleged he was the only obstacle to the public happiness and he was therefore resolved to retire from the scene: he added that the armed presence of the enemy had not afforded the least motive for such a step. An amusing incident of his flight is the fact that the commander at Martin Garcia sent a messenger on board H. B. M. S. Ardent, demanding the person of his ex-excellency as a public offender. We do not know whether the "Gibraltar of the Plata" offered to stop the passage; it is however certain that the English officer replied, with an intimation that he would not give up his guest; but, at the same time, felt highly honored by his communication and kissed his hands.

Pedernera wishes to assume the cast-off mantle but he will probably find it not to fit him, unless thoroughly remodelled by Urquiza and Mitre, state tailors to the Executive. Affairs at Paraná are "out of joint," and it is plain that the last fashion of constitutional garb is thrown aside as unfit for the proximate change of season—Mitre is elected Provisional Director, with Urquiza's acquiescence. The expedition to Cordoba is ready to strike tents and off—: ex-Governor Peña is intent to oust governor Olmos, just as titular governor Alcorta went to supersede the Tabondas; but it is possible Olmos may not "Knuckle down" so softly as did Villafañe of Tucuman. The latter it seems, suffered a severe defeat at Manantiales, and altho Col. Navarro did not nominate the new Governor of Tucuman, yet the change of hands shows anything but a victory for the Liberals.

Montevideo.

The old proverb "one must go abroad to learn news of home" is verified in a statement in the "Nacion" of Oct. 19 that Derqui had resigned the Presidency: the same paper mentions a fight to have taken place between the hostile fleets, and says that Mitre is running short of provisions in Rosario, where beef sold at 22 silver reals per arrobe. We read of a new volcano in Chile, which opened a crater near the city of Chillan; throwing up clouds of smoke by day and fiery scintillations by night.

The Matriz church was opened for the novena of All Souls, on Friday 25th ult. The "Nacion" calls loudly for a concordat with Rome to avoid ecclesiastical difficulties. The Brazilian war-steamer Pedro II was stranded on the Punta de Carretas and all efforts to get her off were unavailing: this is the third vessel of the Imperial navy lost within one year. The society of painters gave a grand ball in Solis theatre, and a beer-distillery has been established. Government is preparing a polyglot work on the varied riches of the Banda Oriental, which is to be distributed at the London Exhibition of, 62.

An article on Mendoza shows that the work of rebuilding on the ruined sites goes on natively: over 8,000 persons inhabit already the new city which is built mostly of wood. Reports in Montevideo said that Saa has returned to Santa Fé with 2,000 men, being joined by La Prida & others: it is believed that Urquiza will form an inter-fluvial Republic of Entre-Rios & Corrientes.

On the 5th & 6th it blew a strong gale from the N. W. but, fortunately, there are no grave casualties. The pilotboat "Eduardo," master Nicholas Landy, succeeded in rescuing the crew, 4 in number, of the galera "Rosita" which had foundered about 4 leagues from S. Gregorio. These poor men had taken to the boat, and expected immediate death, when they were so gallantly saved. One man, a passenger, was, however, lost. The Spanish war-steamer "Covadonga" went to assist a dismasted barque, near Isla de Flores, supposed to be the "Eva" from Havanna.

It is rumored that the foreign men-of-war will ply as packets between this city & Buenos Aires, seeing the want of a regular steam communication. The Chief of Police, Botana, was severely reprimanded for misconduct in arresting an Editor, and resigned his office, but the President refused admitting his renunciation. Important gold and iron mines have been discovered in Rio Grande, which Mr. Plant, an English geologist sent thither on exploring pursuits, has declared valuable. The Lyric Company is about to leave for Buenos Aires.

Paraguay.

A new customs' tariff is about to be published. On the 17th ult. a strange meteor was observed near Piribebuy, about 3½ P. M. It was a ball of fire, rapidly revolving and casting forth electric sparks resembling lightning, leaving, in its passage, long blue stripes, and then disappearing in the S. W. Immediately after, a great report was heard, which lasted for some time, being distinctly audible in the Department of Missiones.

Ocampo left the last city for San José on the 6th inst Ex-Governor Pascual Rosas had gone to hold a conference with Urquiza. L. Col. the Indian invasion we learn, that some 50 warriors penetrated as far as Laguna de Galvan situated between Brigado and 25 de Mayo. Although they were pursued they succeeded in carrying off a flock of mares and horned cattle from Don. A. Lezica's estancia, which they were intent on plundering, since they did not touch any other animals in their transit.

It was expected in Rosario, that our army would break up its encampment on the 11th or 12th inst. one division marching on Cordoba, the other on the capital of Santa Fé. Derqui, on the eve of departure received visits of condolence from Molinas and Olmos, H. E. had not arrived in Montevideo up to the 10th, although it is certain that was his destination.

The city-trenches have suffered sentence of demolition and the materials are to be auctioned off by Government: the outer line of fortification is, of course, left untouched.

Pauperism in England, Scotland, and Ireland.

At the meeting of the British Association, in Manchester, on Tuesday, Mr. Frederick Purdy read a paper on "The relative pauperism in England, Scotland, and Ireland, 1851-60." The paper treated of the relative pauperism of England, Scotland, and Ireland during the ten years ended-in 1860. In England the average number of paupers was 802,000; in Scotland, 121,000; in Ireland, 96,000, or 3.9, 4.0, and 1.5 per cent. on the population respectively. According to the most recent statistics, there were 43,810 pauper lunatics in the United Kingdom: England having 33,038, Scotland 5,103 and Ireland 5,639 of this unfortunate class. In each 10,000 of the population, England has 17, Scotland the same, and Ireland 9 only. In the ten years 92,000,000*l.* had been raised in poor rates: in England 78,000,000*l.*, Scotland 6,000,000*l.*, and Ireland 8,000,000*l.* Comparing the amount expended in 1860 with that of 1851, it appeared that in England it was now 10 per cent., and in Scotland 25 per cent. higher; in Ireland, on the other hand, it was now 60 per cent. lower. The yearly cost per pauper was, for England 6*l.*, Scotland 5*l.* and Ireland 7*l.* Ireland stands higher here, because relief in the workhouse is dearest individually, though, in its ultimate effects, the most economical and the least demoralising. The rate per head on the population of the assessments under schedules A, B, and D was computed to show the relative wealth of the three countries, this in England was 11*l.* 17s.; in Scotland 9*l.* 13s.; and in Ireland 3. 11s. Taking these figures in conjunction with previous ratios, it would appear that the pauperism has been inversely as the poverty of the three countries—England the wealthiest and most pauperised; Ireland the poorest and least pauperised; Scotland coming between, but much nearer to England in wealth and in pauperism. It was asked, in conclusion, if Ireland, under judicious administration of her poor laws, has reduced her pauperism to a quantity which, at the present day, is less than one per cent. of the population, under what conditions can we hope that similar results may be achieved for England and Scotland.

Clofin Bowen, Emperor of France.

Among the curiosities of literature may be ranked an extract from a Yankee journal (copied into the Tribuna) discovering the important secret that Louis Napoleon died many years ago, and that Napoleon III is no other than a wide-awake Jonathan who has gulled the French nation.

"During his residence in the United States, the late Prince Louis Napoleon contracted an intimacy with a New York black-leg named Clofin Bowen, who, by the way, resembled the Prince so closely that even their friends found some difficulty to distinguish them. On the night preceding the Prince's intended departure for Europe he and Bowen met at the theatre, going afterwards to sup at a house of ill fame, with two females of easy virtue. They entered a private room where the landlady waited on them; and Louis Napoleon partook of his last meal. For, while the Champagne was passing round, the Prince fell to the floor in an apoplectic fit and expired immediately. All present were struck with alarm, the landlady declaring his highness's death would bring the police upon her, and deprive her of her license. Don't be afraid, said Clofin after a brief pause, I will go to Europe and pass off for the Prince. We have been such friends that I know all his private affairs. Come, I'll take his clothes, purse, watch and rings. His luggage is already in his berth on board the steamer; he has dismissed his servant, so that I have only to go aboard. But, first, let us bury the poor Prince.

"Accordingly the three women assisted by Bowen had soon dug a grave in the back-yard, and there at present lies Prince Louis Napoleon. The rest is easily understood: Clofin Bowen, the daring adventurer is to-day Napoleon III, Emperor of the French. His accomplices are still living, being supported in easy style in American society by funds supplied from France."

Mercantile register & directory.

The great majority of our foreign friends experience, from time to time, the want of a general directory such as is found in every large city at home, and this desideratum we propose to supply. Something of the kind has been heretofore attempted, but, the difference of language, and irregular classification, in a manner, nullified its interest. Written in English it will be equally accessible to our brethern of the three kingdoms, to Germans and Americans, as well as to a large proportion of the native and other foreign houses. Based on the form of Thom's Post Office Directory it will comprise analphabetical list of all our commercial firms and professional men, public offices and their regulations, dignitaries civil and otherwise, statistics of trade, population and finance; in a word every thing about town. Moreover it will embrace all the partidos of Buenos Aires giving, with their extent and distance, an enumeration of the principal estancias their owners, dimensions and number of cattle, also the local magnates, schools, national guards, hotels, doctors & bridges. In an appendix will be found the railways, diligences, post-houses and every convenience for travelling.

To every one in town and country it will prove a useful Vade Mecum, and, being published annually, on January 1st, will answer every requirement.

Persons putting down their names as subscribers before December 15th will have a preference of 10 p0|0 in the retail price.

Answers to Correspondents.

T. K. Fortin.— Your paper went with the rest, and as your name is on our agent's list, the latter must be either a confirmed dolt or secret enemy not to have given it you.

Capilla.—You ask us about an "affair of honor which didn't take "place in Paris, between one of our "Porteño scribblers and an Austrian "officer:" we know nothing of such a negative proposition.

An enquirer.—As to the respective ages of our brother Editors we decline impertinent questions, but believe they are mostly juvenile; those of the Duende are still school-boys, and there is scarcely one who has attained an honorable old age, altho, some of our colleagues are in their second infancy.

Delamour.—Nothing for nothing, is our motto, and you can take your change.

Ruenchos.—The machine for catching them is a simple trap; it would be desirable to exterminate these animals, but require also a long time.

Sept. 31st.—We really cannot tell you what day this is, on which our American colleague fixes a ship's sailing: it may correspond with St Tibb's eve.

Summer clothing.—You will find the article with Temperley or Moss, but we would caution you against the little boys who may ask you for "Orchata". Ducks, contrary to the English proverb, are unsuitable for wet weather.

TO
CAPTAIN THOMAS OWER
OF THE BRITISH BRIQUE
LA FLOR DEL PLATA.

Dear Sir,

We the undersigned cabin passengers desire before going ashore to return our sincere thanks to you, for your very great kindness and attention to us during our pleasant passage from England. The voyage, sir, has been to us, as a long voyage must be to every one accustomed to the society of home, tedious latterly, yet by your great kindness and good will, you have not only enlivened, but shortened our passage. Accept therefore, our heartfelt gratitude and wishes for your future happiness and welfare; and trusting that at some future day, we may have the pleasure of again sailing with you, we wish you a long & prosperous life in the profession you so ably support.

Signed—Maria Sones — Matilda Riddle.

To country subscribers.

Our friends in the camp will please bear in mind that the 1 years's subscription in advance became due a fortnight ago (Oct. 31) and they will much oblige, by paying the same to our agents, or sending an order on some house in town. The best subscriber is he who pays most punctually.

LOCAL EVENTS.

European mails.— The French Packet Co. closes the mail bags for Europe to morrow at noon: the "Diligente" goes out same day at 4 P. M. The "Mersey" is not expected to arrive before next Monday.

Foreign races.—The 11th instbeing a holiday and the weather propitious, great numbers of our foreign & native population were present at the races of Loma de Zamorra. Everything passed off agreeably and crowds of cavaliers returned in the evening all evidently delighted with the day's enjoyments.

Cricket match. — The British Cricket Club played off a match on last Monday.

Pick and choose.— In to-day's columns will be found Mr. Parker's catalogue, comprising fine sheep in various lots and localities: also 15,000 in Arrecifes & 600 in Quilmes. Of rams there is every variety: Ms Healy's Ramboullets, Mr. Woodgate's of Villa de Mercedes, Ms. Ruiz's Negreties, & Mr. Deetjen's of same breed.

Market reports. — In town, money tight, nothing doing; in the country, shearing going on, hands scarce, no fear of a drought next year.

Immigrants.—Arrivals last week are: Italians 215; Basques 139, Irishmen 11—total 365. They are welcome: would it were double the number.

Found drowned.— Mr. John Fynn, pilot, relates that, in conducting the American barque "Jane Williams" from Montevideo to this port, he perceived, 5 leagues S. W. of Cerro, the body of a young lady apparently about 18 or 20 years of age, with fair hair, black silk dress & gold bracelets; and about 300 yards off, the corpse of a man dressed in black trousers and white shirt.

Terrible shipwreck —There is too much reason to fear that the "Mustapha Pacha" from Bordeaux to this port was lost with all her crew and 37 passengers. The Captain of the "Margarita" relates that passing near the English bank, he saw signs of a recent wreck and, among the fragments, picked up a brandy cask marked "G. Berges & Co; Bordeaux" and another "B. & L. vieux cognac No. 196; we are told these appear in the manifest of said vessel.

Errata.— In our shipping-list appear two vessels which sailed on Nov. 1st the Dutch goletta "Economie" and the swedish brig, "Fride." Also the "Langeen" from Liverpool, entered same day, escaped our notice till too late for correction.

Exchange.—On England is going up sensibly, last quotation 65 shillings on France 82.

San Martin.— The festival of our patron-saint went off with something less than usual eclat. The review consisted of a single battalion, and the number of spectators was not great, owing to the absence of so many citizens in campaign. Two years have elapsed since the famous treaty of Flores: tempora mutantur.

Mississippi. — This vessel is undergoing the crinoline process, described in our last; a multitude of empty barrels are fastened round her stays; some say there is too much bustle about her, but few are inclined to think her of a light character.

Colon & Victoria.— In one theatre the ballet company is giving first-rate entertainments; in the other the Buffos and Spanish Drama divide attention. The Bolero of Mmes. Thierry & Ferrari & MM. Martini & Bernardelli is a chef d'oeuvre. It is not true that any of the Buffos has been seized with delirium tremens.

Our letter-box—Can any reader of the "Standard" say whether our diplomatic friend Doctor Foster is the author of an article, signed "Foster," on Illinois railroads, in the last N.° of the "Com. Times" dated Monday Nov. 9th 61?

The Chimborazo.—This colliergue died prematurely last week, but we understand it will shortly reappear like the Phœnix, more glorious after mortality.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE ARMIES OF EUROPE.

In the course of the season just concluded a lecture on "The Armed Forces of Europe" was delivered, at the United Service Institution, by Captain Petrie, of her Majesty's 14th Regiment, employed on the Topographical Staff. The subject is one so full of interest, and so constantly discussed, that we willingly avail ourselves of Captain Petrie's great carefulness and research for the means of supplying our readers with the information which they would otherwise find it difficult to obtain at all, or, if it were obtained, it would fail to possess such a character of authenticity as obviously distinguishes the statements which we now reproduce :—

AUSTRIA.

The war establishment of the Austrian army, according to the organisation that came into force in April, 1860, is as follows:—309 battalions of infantry, 437,964; 41 regiments of cavalry, 60,110; 136 batteries of artillery, 27,176, guns, 1,008; 2 regiments of engineers, 7,460; 6 regiments of pioneers, 6,858; 24 squadrons sanitary corps, 18,204; 10 companies of sanitary corps, 2,550; staff corps, corps of adjutants, and general staff, 3,389; total regular army, 564,311; volunteer corps organised in 1859, 30,000; depots and reserves of all arms, 103,751; gendarmerie, police, veterans, &c., 40,382; grand total of forces, 738,844; total guns, 1,088.

PRUSSIA.

Infantry — Guard, 9 regiments, 38,674; line, 72 regiments, 229,392; jager, 10 battalions, 10,480; total, 268,546. Cavalry—48 regiments, 36,768; feld jager and staff orderlies, 902; total, 37,670. Landwehr and garrison troops, &c., 261,126; grand total of forces, 719,092; total guns, 1444.

RUSSIA.

The army of Russia is so complicated in its organisation that there would be considerable difficulty in making an exact analysis of it; but the numbers have been ascertained, with sufficient accuracy, to be on the present reduced establishment about 850,000 men. Of these the active army numbers 520,528 men, and 1,160 guns; the rest are composed of disciplined Cossacks and Irregular troops.

Morning Post.

OUR RAILWAYS.

The total amount of money raised up to the present time by share or loan for railway purposes in the United Kingdom is not much less than the enormous sum of three hundred and fifty millions. On the 1st of January, 1859, the precise amount was 325,375, 507*l.*, made up in three items of—ordinary share capital 181,837,781*l.*, preference shares, 61.854,546*l.*; loans, 81,683,179*l.* On the gross total there has been spent for parliamentary and legal expenses 6 per cent.; for land and compensation, 18 per cent.; for works, 66 per cent.; and for rolling stock, 10 per cent. The average cost of railways up to the beginning of 1859 had been 34,243*l.* per mile for Great Britain and Ireland; but when we come to look at the comparative cost of each of the three great divisions of the kingdom the difference is very striking In England the average cost had been 38,779*l.* in Scotland, 27,534*l.*; and in Ireland, only 11,061*l.* But, while these figures represent the average expenditure for the whole period over which our railway system extends, it has been noticed as a singular fact that, as regards lines for which acts have been obtained since 1848, the average cost has been only 10,500*l.* a mil—viz, 12,600*l.* in England,' 9,700*l.* in Scotland, and 6,600*l.* in Ireland. The total receipts on account of passengers, parcels, horses, carriages and dogs, were, in 1858, 11,697,004*l.*; in 1859, 12,530, 646*l.*; and in 1860, 13,085,756*l.*, showing an increase in 1859 of 832,742*l.*, and in 1860 of 555, 110*l.* The increase in 1860 was thus at a much diminished rate as compared with that in the previous year; but although that lessened rate of progress may be due partly to other causes, it may be recollected that the increase shown on 1859 must be regarded, to some extent, as indicating a recovery from the stagnation which the panic year 1858 produced in railway traffic. There is a diminution in the average fare for each class for 1860 as compared with 1858; but there is an increase when we take the average fare received for all classes. This points either to a greater proportional increase in the higher classes of passengers than in the third class, or to a greater average length of the journey performed by passengers in 1858 than in 1860 The rate of increase in third—class passengers in 1859, as compared with 1858, is almost double that in first, and considerably higher than that in second, while, in 1860, the rate of increase in the first-class has rapidly advanced, and that in the third class has fallen to nearly two per cent. under that in the second class. Contrary to what might have been expected the proportion of passengers travelling by the third-class is less in Ireland than in Great Britain; but this apparent preference for the more expensive mode of travelling in Ireland is readily accounted for by the fact that the general population of Ireland do not yet avail themselves of railway accommodation to the same extent as in Great Britain, and especially in England the number of passengers in England in 1858 having been 115,956,957, while in Ireland it was only 8,447,774, not much more than half of the number in Scotland, which was 14,788,908. The vastly greater proportion of third class passengers in Scotland, is very striking.—

Evening Mail

At Warsaw, on the 7th, which was the anniversary of the coronation of the Emperor of Russia, and consequently an official fete, about 100,000 persons assembled in the different churches to attend a funeral service for the Poles who died, arms in hand, in defending Warsaw against the Russian army in 1831. General Lambert, the new Governor, had the good sense not to oppose the demonstration. On the 29th ult, a remarkable incident occurred. A cortege of 20,000 persons was following to the grave a young Pole, who died from wounds received in the collision of the 8th April. The general met the procession, and asked what it meant. On being told, he alighted from his carriage, sent away the police, placed himself in the cortege, and went with it to the cemetery. General Lambert, we have before remarked, is an Irishman, if not by birth, as least by descent.

The Independance says that Baron Ricasoli has either sent, or is on the point of sending, proposals to the court of Rome. The Pope is offered a part of the city of Rome, with independent jurisdiction and inviolability of territory.

Mrs. W., the widow of a celebrated musician, had inscribed upon his monument. "He is [gone where only his music can be excelled." The widow of a pyrotechnist saw this, and had inscribed on her husband's tomb, "He is gone where only his fireworks can be excelled."
